FARMER POET ON VANDERBILTS

Cutter. Whom Mark Twain Made Famous, Writes Poem on Lake Success Improvement and Sunday Violations.

HE GIVES UP HIS FARM.

Bunday Golfers, Automobilists and Sportsmen Drive Him from Litue Neck Property He Has Controlled for Many Years.

The proposed purchase of Lake Suc cess by William K. Vanderbilt, as the public knows, has aroused the people of Little Neck, L. I. It has also aroused the muse of old Bloodgood H. Cutter, of that place. One of the best known chararcters in that locality and famous throughout Long Island, he also is more er" in Mark Twain's "Innocents Abroad."

Mark and he have been lifelong friends, and many of the quaint and humorous sayings attributed to the humorous sayings attributed to the author must be credited by right to the plain, picturesque old farmer. Now the latter has sold the historic old Cutter farmhouse to one of his former farm hands. The old man obected to what he called the desceration of the Sabbath by the running of automobiles and indulgence in other sports. He believes that Lake Success is bottomless, and thinking so, he has written this poem, the publication of which is authorized.

LAKE SUCCESS.

BY BLOODGOOD H. CUTTER. As Lake Success I do pass by, Over it, then, I cast my eye, It is, indeed, a lovely scene, With trees around clad in pure green. Its location is on high ground, The hills do it there surround; It is, indeed, so very deep, With banks beneath its waters steep.

on extensive improvements in its suburban service.

I have known it seventy years or more Boys would go fishing on its shore. Below Aunt Katie's was a rock, Near that one Sunday we did flock.

On that rock fishing I did stand With a long fish pole in my hand. That seemed to be like real fun, Then wade ashore when I was done.

With my bare feet I walked ashore, My fishhook caught in my toe. And there did so firmly remain, Causing me then a deal of pain.

Next I had to walk home on my heel, so far it made me wretched feel. Man with a knife cut round about. And in that way got the fishhook out I suffered for that Sunday sport, No more to that brook did resort A lesson to me it did give That I'll remember while I live.

To well observe the Sabbath Day And all the laws of God obey; If we do not we'll suffer here, And often, too, will be severe.

This warning I to others give Who to this lake do come to live; On Sabbath don't here resort To fish or sail or to have your sport.

You may not get hooked in your toe, But you may meet with other woe. You may get drowned in it there And sent to regions of despair.

Mr. Vanderbilt bought the ground. That does this lovely lake surround. He is improving the same, too, With pleasure some of it to view.

When he gets his improvements done it will be then a splendid one. On this grand lake can grandly go To have a pleasant sail or row. Or at his leisure on a float, Or swiftly go in his steamboat. To have a carnival at night Would make, indeed, a splendid sight.

would seem like old Venice there, With noble dukes and ladies fair, As they did on Rialto go In royal robes of splendid show.

This reminds me of Blenheim Lake Fine views of that I once did take, Some years ago I did it see: The grand view did astonish me.

Think Mr. Vanderbilt's is more grand Thank Mariborough's in Old England, Except the grand paintings there one Of Mariborough's great victories.

That Blenheim Lake he did espy, Caused him, I think, Success to buy; Like sister duches, with one near When sailing can each other cheer. Vanderbilt's purchase around this lake A better one can seldom make; So near the great city, too, From the high ground the same can view.

I hear Deep Dale they did it name; That likely will attain great fame. It is surrounded by high land, The view from that is very grand. You can look down upon lake below, Like a mirror sometimes doth show: At other times great waves we see, Like it is oft on Galilee.

From house can Garden City view, And railroad cars all running throug Over the great plains far and wi And Roslyn Hill on the north side.

Beyond can see grand Palisades, By nature there is firmly made, Like mountain rock on River Rhine, To see which many do incline.

Then cast your eye on western ridge, See Brooklyn and East River Bridge. And the fine views that are around From New York to New England Sound. Mrs. Vanderbilt now will take The name of Lady of the Lake, And she will be one more grand Than the famous one of Scotland.

On old Long Island is now confined A Lady of the Lake of modern kind. Like Cleopatra she can go On Lake Success and make a show.

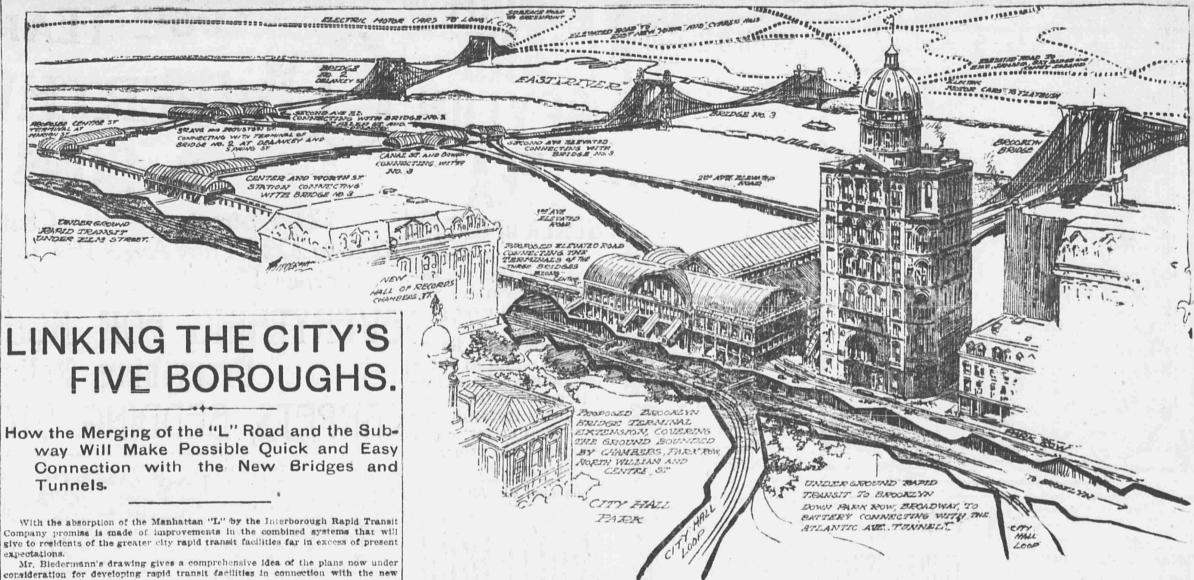

In Dead Sea Lake I there have stood And waded in old Jordan's flood. It's water not so sweet and clear As Lake Success we do have here. f on great lakes we moralize It should make us more truly wise In Scripture read of Nazareth, And never let us that forget.

How our good Lord to men did preach And sound precepts to them teach. Oh, let us on that well reflect And not His teachings now neglect. We plainly read in Sacred Word The earths and lakes are from world. As stewards he has placed us here, In many ways that does appear.

An account hence to Him must give What we have done, how we do live; Life is a serious thing, we know, In a moment may be called to go.

all the great lessons we should heed. Trouble may come on us, indeed,
And as true stewards of the Lord.
We should heed well the Sacred Word,
